

hypermodern local acute hospital

po box 680
great missenden
hp16 0wh

0845 643 1258
info@durrow.org.uk

it is now feasible to offer world-class acute hospital care to smaller populations for clients willing to think outside the traditional nhs box the hypermodern local acute hospital concept offers the clinical firepower of the district general hospital within a revolutionary approach to hospital design that will deliver a very high standard of care and patient experience with lower operating costs than the conventional hospital streamlined clinical pathways, one-stop services, outstanding patient experiences leading to unprecedented satisfaction contained within a therapeutic environment, virtual-zero carbon footprint, ultra-cleanable and completely flexible accommodation designed for a lifetime of adaptation to changing requirements this is not an easy fix that can be quietly overlaid onto a conventional nhs hospital, it remains a difficult concept to work with in 2010, and presents a major challenge to the organisation of clinical roles and services - the rewards are potentially very high for early adopters whether privately provided or part of the local nhs network, this new construct can unlock new possibilities for those contemplating acute hospital reconfiguration for an initial discussion and further information contact andy black:

andy@durrow.org.uk

durrow